WELSH HIGHLAND RAILWAY OPERATIONAL CHRONOLOGY: 1922 - 1937

After the initial euphoria implicit in their first timetables had worn off, the Welsh Highland Railway went through the trauma of poor loadings leading to continuing attempts to contain the costs of operation by adjusting the timetable, to such a degree that it can be difficult to grasp just what level of service was applying at any given time. The recognised histories tend to skate a little warily over service details, with even some contradictory statements in places. Compilation of a complete compendium of each timetable change would have the down-side of tending to obscure the wood for the trees. Meantime, a simple (well, being the WHR, fairly simple) look-up table to show for any given date whether (and if so broadly what) service was scheduled to be operating is offered instead – based wherever possible on the evidence of the railway's own timetables. Anything related to railway timetables could not hope to get away without a quota of footnotes, although one hopes they are not Bradshavian in the extreme – I have endeavoured to avoid notes written vertically up the column, or of the "continued on page 94" variety. The colour coding, which is now such a feature of "heritage" railway timetables, will help to identify similar service patterns. However, it is not essential to understanding the table, which would be selfstanding in plain black and white – though the page would be more drab!

The comings and goings (and renamings) of individual stopping places have proved something of a trial to chronologers of stations so for an analysis of their comings and goings refer to the webpage https://www.welshhighlandheritage.co.uk/wp-content/uploads/WHR-Station-Chronology.pdf

1: one Down train only, no Up trains

2: one Up train only, no Down trains

3: no trains shown in WHR or FR timetables. The one Down train shown in Bradshaw's Guide is an error (carried over from previous year, it has no forward connection). However, WHH no. 9, p.6 and no. 18, p.7 contain recollections of Blaenau Ffestiniog trains at New station in 1930 – presumably in connection with the single Up WHR train, for circular tour patrons

4: no trains shown in WHR or FR timetables. However, Narrow Gauge Railways in South Caernarvonshire (2nd edn.) Vol. 2, p.108 contains instruction for such connection in 1931 and WHH no.9, p.6 and no. 18, p.7 contain recollections of Blaenau Ffestiniog trains at New station in 1931, while Festiniog Railway (3rd edn), plate 49H shows such a train in 1933. Presumably connections were provided each summer for Five Valleys Tour patrons (even though Narrow Gauge Railways in South Caernarvonshire (2nd edn.) Vol. 2, p.107 seems to cast doubt).

5: it is questionable whether the single WHR round trip for this fortnight (always) ran through to/from Harbour – see Chronicles of Croesor Crossing, p.24 and WHH no. 32, p.6.

6: After the 1926 General Strike (4 - 13 May 1926) the miners remained on strike and a coal shortage ensued, because of which the WHR did not operate a passenger service (despite the existence of a timetable alteration handbill dated 24 May - 10 July). Traffic figures suggest that the last passenger trains ran on 3 May; services did not resume until Monday 19 July 1926 (Gwynedd archives file XD97/22742).

7: final fortnight of the 1934 season may have been reduced to a single Dinas ⇔ Portmadoc round trip.

Bradshaw's Guide

This denotes Bradshaw's Railway Guide (any date quoted is the cover date), published monthly. The material it carried came, of course, from the railways themselves – although on occasion misunderstandings clearly arose and in some cases (particularly with changes of station names in the station banks of their pages) Bradshaw's Guide could be somewhat dilatory – possibly because their attention had not been adequately drawn to the changes by the railways. The non-appearance of the Welsh Highland during summers 1932 and 1933 must be down to Richard Thomas Griffith (the Receiver & Manager of the time) trying to run a railway in the spare time from his various other activities! Generally speaking, information drawn from Bradshaw's Guide tallies well with the available surviving company-produced timetable material, although wherever possible the latter have been used for this compilation.

Bold type denotes multiple journeys (at least two round trips most days); light type denotes only a single round trip a day – usually a simple out and back working from Dinas Junction. There was no regular Sunday service on the line, so Sunday is regarded as a dies non in the table above.

Goods and parcels

Apart from three weeks in October 1931 (see WHH no.52 page 12) the railway was open for goods and parcels traffic throughout the period under notice (except in consequence of the 1926 strikes). Where practicable, this would have been undertaken by mixed train (the Bryngwyn branch, however, is a subject which requires its own article), otherwise by goods train - sometimes down to only twice, or even once, a week (see WHH no.48 p.9). The section south of Beddgelert must have been a somewhat "nominal" goods service at times: we know, for example, that in 1928 goods trains ran between Dinas and Croesor Junction to exchange traffic for the lower end of the line, a similar function being performed by the "on request" Up mixed train advertised three days a week during 1929 and until September 1930 (it was advertised in only one direction so that if there was no need to go beyond Croesor Junction or Beddgelert, the train could save unnecessary mileage). And when it did run, the mixed train went only to the north side of the Great Western crossing at Portmadoc. However, traffic statistics (Gwynedd archives files XC2/33/37 and /58) show that by the beginning of 1930 all the Croesor valley traffic was being worked by horse through to Gelert/Beddgelert Siding at Portmadoc, for transhipment - which suggests the "on request" train would then rarely (if ever) have run south of Beddgelert, and must have left the Beddgelert 🗢 Croesor Junction section out of use during the following winter. From the end of 1930 the Croesor quarries closed so traffic (if any) at that end of the line would have been limited to coal and other goods inwards to the valley - and, of course, any movements between Gelert Siding and Snowdon Mill or beyond. By early 1930, movements over the Great Western crossing – freight only, of course – were down to an average of two a week (WHH no. 33 p.1). Even in the FR lease period the line was officially open for goods traffic, until that company gave notice of its withdrawal on 31 May 1937.
